Gerard was born in 1962 in Algier, growing up surrounded by the works of his great-uncle Henry Caillet, a painter of the beginning of the 20th century, who embraced the cubist movement.

In his 30's and on the occasion of a journey to Mali, he borrowed his father's Polaroid camera, to be able to leave photographs to the children of the schools of the Dogon country. Gerard never gave the Polaroid camera back.

Eventually his job as information systems manager took more and more time, abandoning little by little the medium of photography.

At the end of 2013, he decided to return to full time photography, taking part in numerous Festivals and exhibitions from 2014 to 2017.

Gerard works on notions of time, and its linear passage, forgotten memories, nostalgia, a sensation of no return and the feeling that our existence will be very brief. Adding to this feeling, Gerard has the fear that our world will quickly become ruined if we don't react soon.
